

DEVELOPING LEADERS TOOLKIT

INTRODUCTION

What do you think of when you think of a leader? Do you think of a politician or a business executive? How about a teacher or a janitor? One of the formal (dictionary) definitions of a leader is, “the person who leads or commands a group, organization, or country.” However, what this definition misses is the idea of influence. Leadership is not about a position or title but about influence. And influence can be wielded by anyone at any level.

What is Leadership?

Influence, which is at the heart of leadership, is gained by demonstrating leadership behaviors. There is a core set of competencies that begin to develop the influence that makes people want to follow you.

The Journey

DEVELOPING LEADERS TOOLKIT

The responsibilities of leaders are many. Leaders must be able to communicate mission, vision, and values. How well can you answer those questions for your organization, function, and team?

- Mission: Why do we exist?
- Vision or Strategy: What must we do?
- Values: How must we behave?
- Projects: How will we get it done?

MISSION VISION
VALUES
PROJECTS

Leaders set the example in how they navigate they're environment. Their response to change, their ability to steer a team or organization through transition, and their level of communication contributes to the culture of an organization. Leaders understand their own strengths and weaknesses, surrounds themselves with people who complement them, and delegate appropriately. Leaders are accountable.

WHAT TYPE OF LEADER ARE YOU?

There are numerous assessment tools available to help you understand your personality type. Those tools are not referenced here. The overarching question of this section is simply – “how emotionally intelligent are you”?

INTRAPERSONAL	Self-awareness: Recognizing your feelings and behaviors Self-regulation: Managing your feelings and behaviors appropriately and staying motivated in spite of setbacks and obstacles Motivation: The desire to improve
INTERPERSONAL	Empathy: Understanding what others feel Social skills: Building rapport and collaborating with others

An emotionally intelligent leader has a distinct advantage as this person is able to weather the storms of leadership. They’re able to handle the setbacks and obstacles that inevitably come and bounce back from failure. They’re able to establish meaningful relationships with others based on real connection. Behavioral assessments in the hands of emotionally intelligent leaders are gold mines as these types of leaders are able to use the results to improve their leadership competence. If you take no other step to improve your leadership ability, improve your EQ.

TOOL #2: ASKING POWERFUL LEADERSHIP QUESTIONS

- What is currently impossible to do that would change everything?
- What would awesome look like?
- What are you trying to prove to yourself and how might it be hindering you?
- What (responsibility) are you avoiding? We can neither challenge nor transform what we ignore, what we will not explore.
- What topic were you hoping I wouldn't bring up today?
- What causes you? What propels your cause? What constrains it?
- What prevents me from making the changes I need to make?
- What stands in your way of doing what needs to be done?
- What reality are you trying to create?
- What do you get if you win that argument?
- What does this bring you? What happens/doesn't happen when...
- How is your behavior opening or shutting down possibilities?
- Where else does that show up?
- What keeps you awake at night, threatening your peace/your biz?
- If this is resolved, what difference will it make? What else?
- How do you go about creating urgency?
- Why do people follow you?
- How are you changing your world this week?
- In what area of your life/business are you least satisfied?
- What assumptions do you need to test/challenge here?
- What's possible here and who cares? Why do they care?
- What have you learned from this? How will you react next time?
- What would someone with a different set of beliefs say?
- What trophy do we want on the company mantle?
- What is it like to work for me?
- Who/what needs your immediate attention?
- DO we have any bad profits?
- If this person quit, you'd do the dance of joy. Who is s/he?
- What one word do we want to own in the minds of our customers?
- What do we need to start doing?

JOB AID: STEPS TO GREAT PROJECTS

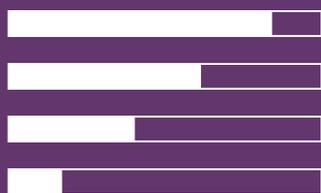

Managing projects well is another way of showcasing leadership skills. Managing projects combines many of the leadership attributes reflected on the competency self-assessment with strong organizational and communication skills. This visual provides a highlight of what it takes to manage projects well. As you review it, note the different leadership competencies at work.

JOB AID: DEVELOPING A LEADERSHIP IMPROVEMENT PLAN

All change starts with a commitment to act. This commitment must be followed by a documented action plan with clear steps and a timeline. Use this template to document your own leadership development plan.

Leadership Transition Plan
What BENEFIT will I get if my leadership improves? What BENEFIT will my team get? What BENEFIT will my employer get?		Who will be my accountability partner / mentor or coach? Who will be a barrier to my growth? (add this to the RISK list below)
